This is a memoir or a narration of a series of events that occurred back in the 1970's all thru the 90's ,when individuals who dared to come across the U.S- Mexico border illegally with hopes to better their lives and those of their siblings made it to U.S soil then proceed all the way to Franklin Avenue Brooklyn N.Y. the odds against them were many yet their will power helped some with their advancements, by the thousands they fell along the way due to their inexperience, men and women drowned in their attempt to come across the Rio Bravo or Rio Grande, and of those who made it to the Big City many later fell victims of the System of violence free handed over to them, these were those who trusted the guns and miscalculated their priorities by choosing instead, to take a part in the vicious world of drugs. Their course of actions dictated their future and their fate, Among the talented ones who were blessed with the victory although not every one knew the importance to worship the True God, there were a few in number in comparison to the huge fallen crowd, their worse opponents or adversaries were no other one than their own selves. The lessons here given are no fairy tales but they are all base on true life experiences, from the beginning to the end of the novel. Now my dear reader be the one to unfold the Golden Ribbon around this book of resurrection. Peace
