His rich discovery will make history... if someone doesn't steal it first.

Archaeologist Darwin Lacroix wants to rewrite history -- that ancient Romans used lava tubes to secret around Europe. But generations of his family have been laughed out of academia for suggesting it. He too is ready to quit when a diamond cache in Iceland is linked to artifacts in the London Underground. When a powerful cartel seizes control of the hunt, Darwin's quest becomes a race against time to reveal the mother lode first.

With a volcanologist and an unsavory diamond expert on board, the academic's search for riches meets lethal obstacles at every turn. Deep underground, the choices Darwin makes could determine who in his party makes it out alive.

Roman Ice is a thrilling suspense novel where Dave Bartell pulls off several neat tricks. He weaves together plot lines set thousands of years apart; incorporates plausible scientific discovery with lava tubes; and creates serious tension out of a long walk in a straight line. If you like alternate history, archaeological adventures, and complex characters, then you'll love this action-packed tale.

Robert

"true page-turner read in two days. Could not put it down. I've been in lava tubes in Hawaii and the concept of travel in them really hit home for me. Great story, always taking different turns, and a great ending."

Raven

"... a brilliant adventure tale which I first thought I'd hate (I'm claustrophobic),but I was thoroughly engaged from the arrival in Iceland until the last page. I was hooked by the fascinating concept, the realistic and surprisingly in depth characterization, and the plot which was studded with great complications and a feeling of urgency. The author gave credibility to his wild tale by his very realistic portrayal of some lovable characters whom I hope to encounter again very soon. Could be the next Indiana Jones series!"
