Explore the changing seasons of nature, and travel with the poet across these pages.

For as long as she can remember, Carolyn Keith Hopper has loved spending time exploring the woods and fields around her home. Swaying tall grasses, mats of pine needles, drifts of wildflowers, and the sounds of cool running streams have been the inspiration behind much of her writing.

In her first collection of poetry, Hopper shares what it feels like to be out in quiet places of natural beauty. With subject matters ranging from birds to flowers to celestial wonders and many other ponderings in between, Poems from a Wild Heart is a reflective compilation about life, love, and loss in the great outdoors.
