About Life, Heavy Sigh

Jean, a young Caribbean-born graduate living in London, buys a book at her favourite market in the capital. She discovers soon enough that there is more mystery to the book than that which comes from the simplicity of its title, Life, Sigh. With every chapter she reads she comes to unintentionally explore the intricacies of her own life through the increasing similarities between herself and the main character in the book.

It is a book within a book.

It is two parallel stories of two young women in their 20s, living in different decades, who are seemingly average but delightfully extraordinary in the ways in which they navigate and understand the essence of life.

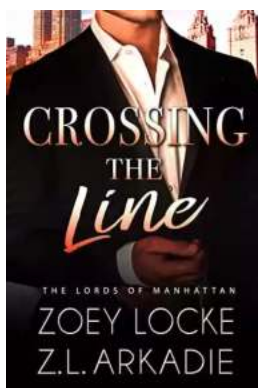

The bookseller, Mr Books, told Jean when she bought the book:

‘This is a very special book’

For those who buy and read Life, Heavy Sigh, the message is the same. This book carries two stories that had to be told. What ‘special’ means exactly, one can only know by reading this book.
